Teacher/learner	Pronunciation challenges
Jonathan	The W is very difficult to pronounce for Hungarian students, and the R for Japanese students.
Bobby	In Chinese you don't need to use your tongue. You just keep the same position of the tongue. In English, you have to find the position of the tongue, and you have to use it more often than Chinese. When you speak sentences, there are lots of contractions, lots of changes of the syllable, lots of rhythm and intonation.
